

I call on our elected representatives:

- to acknowledge that 26 January has a long and painful history for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples.
- consult with the community to choose a new date for Australia Day so it can be celebrated by all.

Yours sincerely,

#ChangeTheDate

Australia Day should be a day for all Australians. But for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, 26 January marks the start of colonisation.

Our country's history goes back well beyond 26 January 1788. It began over 65,000 years ago - and we're still making it now.

Let's respect the survival and resilience of the world's oldest living culture and change the date so we can all celebrate Australia Day. Let's keep the day but change the date.
