FACING A LIFE SENTENCE FOR PEACEFUL PROTESTS

Once a shy, quiet teenager, Panusaya – known as Rung, which means “rainbow” – has become a leading voice in Thailand’s democracy movement. The university student, a vocal proponent for equality and the right to freedom of expression, opposes the use of the lèse-majesté law to silence government critics. In March 2021, the authorities jailed her for 60 days under this law. She went on hunger strike for 38 days and was eventually released. Today, she faces dozens of charges against her and life imprisonment.

Tell Thailand to drop all charges against Rung.
